Cruise & Ferry Shipping Report

Melding The Old With The New

It's a timeless piece of history that is the newest deal going on in the cruise ship industry — the deal between the Delta Queen Steamboat Co. and Atlantic Marine, which calls for the building of two U.S. Coastal flag ships inspired by the former Fall River Line Vessels which ran from 1847 to 1937.

By Regina P. Ciardiello,
assistant editor

It was the age in which water transportation was the only mode of distance travel. Henry Ford and the Wright Brothers had not yet become household names and the horse and carriage reigned as the only means of getting to and fro. Aristocracy held court on ships that sailed the high seas — namely the Fall River Line, which ran from New York to New England. Inspired yet? Executives at Delta Queen were — so much that they decided to model their current project after the famed line.

The paddles began rolling about a year ago at Delta Queen, when visions of the idea were first discussed between Philip Calian, president and CEO, American Classic Voyages (Delta Queen's parent company); and Scott Young, Delta Queen's president and COO.

"Phil and I talked about ways in which we could expand the company," said Young. "When we realized that the cost to design a historic vessel would remain the same, we decided to go that way."

"We thought about how we could further our marketing and product expertise," Calian said. "The Delta Queen project both meets the needs of the market in a cost-effective manner and plays off American history and culture."

Young and his team at Delta Queen spent the next few months working with the Marine Museum in Fall River, Mass., examining photos and drawings of the steamers on which the new Delta Queen is based.

"We looked at the various river steamers so that we could come as close as we could in designing a historic vessel with modern amenities," Young added.

With a design and itinerary ideas in place, Delta Queen began its quest for history in the making on May 7, 1999 — with the naming of Jacksonville, Fla.-based Atlantic Marine as the builder of the first two 300-ft. (91.4 m), 226 passenger vessels at a base price of $30 million each, with launchings scheduled in the spring and summer of 2001.

With the bidding process commencing when 16 invitations were sent out by

change

From top, Philip C. Calian, president and CEO of AMCV; Scott Young, executive vice president, AMCV; and Edward P. Doherty, president, Atlantic Marine, Inc. have helped to bolster cruise vessel new-building in the U.S.
